Daily Schedule

Please provide lessons for your children as your schedule allows. Below is a menu of recommended weekly lessons. The most important lessons that should be completed every week are for reading, writing, and math.

Reading A-Z: Follow the weekly lesson I provide. Also, your child should practice their reading daily for 10 to 20 minutes.

Narrative Writing: The weekly Reading A-Z lesson and the writing lesson are connected. The writing lesson follows the reading lesson preferably on a different day.

Math: Follow the weekly lessons I provide. As an option, you may do the suggested workbook pages in, McGraw Hill My Math Workbook Volume 2. The McGraw Hill My Math Workbook Volume 1 is for review as you see fit. We have completed the lessons for Volume 1 to date.

Vocabulary: At least two words should be completed in the vocabulary book weekly. This a more independent activity that does not require much parent supervision.

Health: I provided a complete health unit with extras that will take you to the end of the school year if you do one lesson per week not counting Spring Break. These lessons were planned to be simple, quick, and fun.

Science: Follow the weekly lesson I provide. Science lessons do require parent supervision and materials, since it is hands on learning. I worked to include materials that are commonly found in the home.

Note: If you are missing any of the above lessons, email me and I will send them to you.
